

Abstract

The present invention resides in apparatus, and software, and a related method for a marketing system which connects advertisers, manufacturers, retailers and customers through coupon incentives and game prizes. A shopping cart return monitoring system issues electronic coupon cards through which customers can purchase discounted items and win prizes and through which manufacturers can attract new customers and sales. System operators are paid by advertisers in return for access to the system and the customers.